Environment and Social Health

Using our unique combination of tools: flight, film and education, CAVU (Climate Advocates Voces Unidas) empowers people to take ownership of and meaningful action on critical conservation and social justice issues in their own communities. We believe that when people are informed and engaged, healthy societies and renewable natural resources thrive.

CAVU works in partnership with other conservation and social justice organizations to create initiatives which bring people new perspectives through the use of the aerial perspective, video employing local voices and social media platforms on issues facing our communities such as access to clean, sustainable drinking water, protection of watersheds, education about and mitigation for climate change, protection and access to clean air. See website for current programs.

CAVU

Our mission is to educate, engage and empower individuals, communities, and leaders to take ownership of and action on climate-related issues in their communities through a multifaceted process using media, scientific research and advocacy tools. In 10 years, CAVU (Climate Advocates Voces Unidas) hopes to be at the forefront of a movement that has effectively solved the climate crisis by fundamentally shifting our society's relationship to the natural world.
