New Mexico Grown Initiative and Farm to Cafeteria

Farm to Table supports efforts to provide fresh, locally-produced fruits and vegetables to New Mexico schools and senior centers through work at the policy level. Efforts include:

New Mexico Grown Fresh Fruits and Vegetables for School Meals initiative: For more than a decade there has been a concerted effort, lead by Farm to Table in partnership with many organizations and agencies, to develop the statewide New Mexico Grown Fresh Fruits and Vegetables for School Meals initiative. This Farm to Cafeteria program was developed to create opportunities for farmers to diversify their markets into schools and enhance New Mexico's farming economy; for schools to be able to buy locally while meeting federal school meal rules; and to enhance the diets of school children while promoting healthy lifestyles and academic achievement. This program is now supported in the state's budget, with a dedicated program and staff at the New Mexico Public Education Department. A similar effort is being developed for to bring New Mexico grown fresh fruits and produce to New Mexico senior centers.
