Intergenerational Community Development

Hands Across Time is a developing project of SINC, that seeks to eliminate suffering caused by poverty, inequality, and prejudice; through inspiring, building and operating fully sustainable intergenerational communities, where displaced children, elders, resident volunteers, foster/adoptive families and young adults who have ‘aged out’ come together with our organization to foster and maintain a supportive community that spans generations.

Our community will offer a variety of programs and services, including; but not limited to:

- art
- holistic living
- sustainability
- life skills training
- financial education
- access to holistic healthcare
- housing
- support systems for transitional periods in life
- animal therapy

One of our goals is to promote an environment where each member has a purpose, place, and value. We also hope to involve our surrounding community with interactive programs.
