Native American Professional Parent Resources Inc (NAPPR)

Native American Professional Parent Resources, (NAPPR) Inc. is located in Albuquerque, New Mexico and was founded in 1982. NAPPR serves 400+ Native and Non-Native American families across a five-county area. In addition to direct services to families with young children in five counties, NAPPR also serves a much wider geographic range through the Albuquerque Area Dental Support Center. NAPPR now includes four distinct programs that aim to strengthen the communities we serve by increasing and supporting healthy families through a range of services. The original program—Early Intervention, continues to serve who have infants/toddlers who are experiencing developmental delays or who are at risk factors for developmental delays. NAPPR also provides universal home visiting using a culturally based model for Native American families with children prenatal through age five with the Tribal Home Visiting Program, Early Head Start center and home-based services for families with children prenatal through age three, as well as support services for Indian Health Service funded Dental Clinics.
