Rio Grande Community Development Corporation

The RGCDC is actively involved in building healthy and sustainable communities in the unincorporated South Valley of metropolitan Albuquerque through economic development (SVEDC) and non-profit capacity support (SINC). Projects and collaborations with partner organizations include environmental health, justice, and quality land use planning, small business development, improving access to health care, life style wellness, cultural events including art and literature, leadership development and advocating for quality improvement of basic infrastructure including streets, water and waste water. The RGCDC is the community's resources to address it's own challenges.
