Behavioral Health Services

Treatment programs are available in English and Spanish and in individual, group or family settings. The Life Link offers outpatient treatment programs for chronic and persistent mental health issues, including substance addictions, depression, anxiety, bi-polar, co-occurring disorders, PTSD and trauma, grief/loss, relationship/family issues, and domestic violence/anger management.

The Santa Fe Clubhouse is one of the many outpatient treatment programs for clients with chronic mental illness and substance use at The Life Link. It is a model of psychosocial rehabilitation, providing a space where members make decisions, present ideas on the operation of the facility and give suggestions as to what kinds of activities they would like to see offered. Each weekday, members arrive, pour themselves a cup of coffee or tea, greet friends and staff, sign up for the daily tasks and for the psycho-social rehabilitation groups.
