Wildlife for All

With our coalition partners, we lead, coordinate and support efforts in NM and other states to drive the following state-level reforms:

- Enact legislation that aligns wildlife management with public trust principles, so that all species are valued and protected, all voices are heard and respected, decisions are based on sound science and values that are explicitly acknowledged, deliberations are transparent and accountable, and decisions are based on what is in the long-term best interest of wildlife, habitats, and current and future generations of humans.
- Change the way wildlife commissions are constituted to reflect the broad public interest in wildlife, and to prioritize their duty as trustees to protect the wildlife public trust.
- Refocus wildlife agencies to act as administrators of the wildlife public trust, and to prioritize protection of species and habitats over everything else.
- Establish new sources of funding for wildlife conservation that are broad-based and not connected to particular “uses” of wildlife.
- Require state wildlife agencies to be transparent and accountable to the general public by, for example, posting detailed information about their sources of revenues and expenditures on their websites, posting information about how federal Pittman-Robertson and Dingell-Johnson grants are spent, etc.

Wildlife for All

Our mission is to reform wildlife management in the U.S. to be more democratic, just, compassionate and focused on protecting wild species and ecosystems. We do this by leading a national coalition of reform advocates, raising awareness about the need to reform the current system to protect all wildlife and prevent extinctions, and supporting on-the-ground reform campaigns in New Mexico and other strategically targeted states.
